

It is unbelievable, how in a country where free enterprise is like no where else in the world, that the government sees fit to interfere with services such as this only to please lobbyists who are NOT lobbying in the best interest of consumers but rather, to those contributors who pay them to limit consumer choices. I pay for this service, it is an excellent service, but I fear again the government just has to stick their hands where they do not belong. Like everything else the government interferes with, I immediately fear price increases and poorer services the minute the government touches it. To what degree, have CITIZENS or CONSUMERS complained that would justify such an intrusion?? And, it isn't as if our politicians have nothing better to do with the time we have elected them to spend. But that's right, they do not work for us, only the lobbyists.
